New Lenox Man Killed
While Switching Train

Believed to have fell into the path of a Santa Fe diesel switch engine, pulling 40 cars, Jerome Salz, 28 of New Lenox, was killed Wednesday morning about 1:50 a. m. He was a switchman and his body was found by Delmar Bradbury of Lockport a fireman on the switch engine.

There were no witnesses to the accident which occurred about 100 yards from the railroad bridge across the deep waterway, a half mile north of the Ruby street bridge in Joliet. The E J & E spur line connects with the Santa Fe at this point. The coroner, Willard Blood, said the engine and the 40 cars passed over his body.

The engine was pushing cars onto the E J & E tracks, and the engineer was waiting for a signal from Salz, not seeing him on the railroad siding, the fireman began a search for him and found his mangled body on the tracks.

At the last regular meeting of the board of education of the New Lenox school, the board went on record as endorsing the recommendation of the County survey committee, that this district be merged with the other school districts of this township, Frankfort and the north two thirds of Manhattan township, to form a "Community Unit District." They urged the patrons of the school district to vote in favor of the issue in the election which will be held Saturday.

This action was taken because the members of the school board felt that it is necessary for such consolidation if the community expects to maintain the kind of schools to which the children of this area are entitled to.

It is the opinion of the board that in order to keep pace with the new demands being put on schools, it has become almost impossible for the small school district to give the children a modern education. Larger districts can more readily afford to offer classes, such as manual training, home economics, than can a small district. Our present school district would have to greatly increase the present tax rate to do this.

The large increase in enrollments in the New Lenox district, with a very small proportionate increase in property valuation, has brought about a situation in which even the minimum, offering which the district has been given can not actually be done effectively much longer. The great increase in cost of every other item on the school budget, plus the need for more teachers, has created a difficult financial problem for the district as well as other districts in this area.

It is also the opinion of the board that a co-ordinated educational program for grades 1 to 12 will be more advantageous than the present setup. If one board is responsible for the entire educational program there should be a continuity of purpose which is lacking at present.

One member of the board added this thought: "It seems that if we want our township to keep on attracting the kind of people who are interested in the better things of life, and certainly we can't have them without the best of schools, we had better support this issue."

Election Facts

The election is Saturday, February 5 from 12 noon till 7 p. m.

New Lenox polling places are: No. 1—New Lenox public school, for those living in the incorporated limits of the village.

No. 2—Schmull school, two miles east of New Lenox on Route 30, for everyone living in the unincorporated part of New Lenox east of Cedar road.

No. 3—Gauger school, across from green house, polling place for anyone living in unincorporated part of New Lenox west of Cedar road.

THE ISSUE

Whether the present school district of New Lenox, Frankfort, and north 2-3 of Manhattan townships shall be consolidated into a community unit district.

How The Vote Is Counted

The total vote of the village will be counted together, as well as the total votes in the rural polling places of 3 townships. For the issue to carry, it will have to be voted favorably in both the rural and village precincts. If it fails to pass in either area, the issue will be defeated.

Your Income Tax

John T. Jarecki, Collector of Internal Revenue for the First District of Illinois

Married Persons—Joint or Separate Returns

If husband and wife have separate incomes (for example, if both work, or if they have income from investments, they may file separate returns or a joint one.) A separate return accounts only for the income, exemptions and deductions of both husband and wife. Also a husband and wife may file a joint return even though one of them has no income.

It is not necessary that a husband and wife be living together in order to file a joint return. The only requirement is that on the last day of the year they must be legally married.

If your husband or wife died during the year, you are considered to be married for the entire year and may file a joint return.

The split income provisions of the Federal tax law do not apply to separate returns. In filing separate returns, the husband and wife must each report the income which legally belongs to him or her. Each must claim the deductions for these allowable expenses paid with his or her own funds.

If one spouse itemizes and claims actual deductions instead of using the tax table or the standard deduction, then both must itemize and claim actual deductions on Long Form 1040.

In making a joint return list both names in the heading of the return for example, John T. Smith and Mary K. Smith, also both must sign the return.)

The present law usually makes it advantageous for married couples to file joint returns. The split income method of computing the tax on a joint return usually results in a smaller tax than would result from separate returns.

If you make a joint return on Form 1040A, the Collector will figure your tax both on the separate and the joint basis, and give you the benefit of the smaller tax.

Woman's Department

Thorough shampooing is a fine clean-up treatment for upholstered furniture if the fabric cover is colorfast. Home management specialists at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture recommend this treatment.

First you'll need to make up a batch of soap jelly to use for the shampooing. Here's the recipe: Pour 1 cup of hot water over 2 cups of mild soap flakes, and beat to a jelly with a rotary beater.

Now test the fabrics to make sure it will not change color. Make the test on a spot that won't show. This is the way to do it: Dip a sponge or cloth in lukewarm water and wring it out dry; then dip it into the soap jelly. Rub the soap jelly on the spot. Remove the lather by rinsing the spot with a cloth or a sponge wrung dry out of clear lukewarm water.

If the color is not affected by the soap jelly, proceed with the shampooing. Do only a small area at a time, applying the jelly to the fabric and rinsing thoroughly. Take care not to dampen the stuffing in the furniture.

Duke Gets His Tractor

Duke Thomas bought a farm with the money he'd saved in the Service, but he couldn't get a tractor. He needed it badly, but was tenth on the local dealer's list.

"Tell you what," old man Peters says. "If those nine fellows ahead of you agree, you'll get the next one I get in." "No, thanks," says Duke, "I'll just take my turn."

But old Peters mails out nine postcards. And the other day he tells Duke his tractor will be in next week. "I simply wrote the facts to the fellows ahead of you. They decided it."

This is a diesel... a modern locomotive that means better service to you.

Leaders of two unions think it's a feather-bed... a "make work" grab that means less service to you.

● Leaders of unions representing railroad engineers and firemen seek to force railroads to add extra, needless men on diesel locomotives. This is sheer waste—a "make-work" program which would mean fewer improvements and higher costs—for YOU!

Railroads use modern diesel locomotives because they are one of the means of giving faster, better service to you.

Two men compose the crew of a diesel. They occupy a clean, comfortable cab at the front. The engineer handles the throttle. The fireman sits and watches the engine. With no coal to shovel, he does nothing else to do.

No Benefit To You

Now the leaders of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers and the Brotherhood of Railroad Firemen and Enginemen want to use the diesel locomotive as a means of forcing a feather-bedding scheme on the railroads. The extra men they propose to add to the diesel crews are not needed. There is no work for them.

The union leaders are fighting among themselves about which union should furnish these extra, needless men. The Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers have even threatened a strike. You may not be interested in this dispute of these two unions, but you would be vitally concerned if these groups succeed in putting through this feather-bedding scheme, because it would mean a slowing up of the improvement program of the railroads—of which the diesel is the outstanding symbol. Diesel crews are among the highest paid railroad employees—real aristocrats of labor! Their pay is high by any standard. Granting of these demands, therefore, would mean that the railroads would be paying out millions in unearned wages to those in the very highest pay brackets.

We'd Like To Spend This Money On You

You know how much the diesel has meant to you in increased speed, comfort and convenience. The railroads have many more of them on order for even greater improvement in service to you. But needless drains of money, such as this present demand of the unions for needless men on diesels, reduce the ability of the railroads to spend money on better service for you.

Proud as the railroads are of the diesel, it is only a small part of their improvement program. Since the War, literally billions of dollars have been spent on improvement of tracks and stations, on new passenger and freight cars, as well as on diesel locomotives, and on the many other less conspicuous details of railroading that contribute to improved service.

Feather-Bedding Means Less Service To You But brazen feather-bedding schemes like the one now proposed would, if successful, divert large sums of money from our present improvement programs. Even worse, they make improvements like the diesel worthless, by making the cost of their operation prohibitive.

These demands are against YOUR interests—as well as those of the railroads. They are schemes to "make work". Neither you nor the railroads should be forced to pay such a penalty for progress.

That's why the railroads are resisting these "make work" demands to the last ditch—and why they are telling you about them.

We are publishing this and other advertisements to talk with you at first hand about matters which are important to everybody.

High School Courses Obsolete: N. U. Prof. Asks Revamping

The nation's high schools must revamp their courses completely to meet the needs of youth today, according to a Northwestern University educator.

William G. Brink, professor of education, who recently surveyed a number of public high schools for the U. S. government, said today that 553 out of every 1,000 pupils; more than a million a year, drop out of school before graduation from high school, and the reason is that they fail to find school programs that are interesting, satisfying, and challenging to them.

Many feel, and with ample justification, he said that the courses offered are highly abstract and have little practical value. "The nation can ill afford this prodigious waste of human resources," he declared, "but youth must be convinced of the worthwhileness of their schooling if they are to continue until graduation."

Citizenship training is the weakest link in our education program, according to Prof. Brink, who is supervisor of Northwestern's student teaching course. Required history and civics classes too frequently are little more than exercises in memory without stress on interpretation and relationship to the contemporary scene, he declared. Few help a youth to fill his lace in society. College preparatory curricula are dominant even in centers where the vast majority of students do not go on to college.

"High schools should institute more realistic methods of instruction, emphasize improvement of reading skills and develop among the pupils satisfactory study and leisure time habits," he said. "The student should be taught in school to acquire salable skills and an intelligent understanding of economic life. High schools should make him familiar with the contributions of science; cultivate in him an appreciation of art, literature, music and nature; and develop this competency in the various areas of communication—reading, writing, listening and speaking. He should learn to purchase and use goods and services wisely and to have respect for human personality, so that he will exhibit a high degree of tolerance, cooperation and good will."

WASHINGTON NEWS LETTER

From Congressman N. M. Mason

Where Are We Going? The semi-official British Socialist newspaper, "The New Statesman and Nation" says the endorsement of the New Deal by the American voters in the November election is just "another evidence of a world-wide trend to the left." "The Economist of London" in its November 13th issue says: "Mr. Truman's election is, by universal consent, a victory for the New Deal; it is Roosevelt's Fifth Term." When we consider that Britain under her Socialist government has nationalized her farms, her mines, and her railroads and has taken steps to nationalize her steel industry, these British expressions concerning the results of our election should cause us to wonder where we are going. Is it to be "Socialism under Truman?"

Six Midwest farm states with a total of 101 electoral votes swung the election to President Truman and by so doing gave tacit approval to the New Deal program. Make no mistake about it, the farm vote and not the labor vote elected President Truman. Yet the American farmers constitute the most conservative group in America, the group that has the greatest stake in private ownership. We are now headed toward the socialization of farm lands—exactly what England has today. The English farmer can be dispossessed whenever some government bureaucrat says he is not farming as the government tells him to farm. If the government guarantees the farmer certain ceiling prices for his crops he cannot complain if the government requires him to cultivate his land as the government directs. If he does not do as required then the English law says: "In the case of an owner, the land will be purchased from him compulsorily. An owner-occupier of a farm may be required to let his land to a government approved tenant."

Is this where we want to go?

U. of I. Girls Tell Career Choices

Home is the center of interest for today's girl, just as it was for her mother. That shows up in the career choices of a large group of girls at the University of Illinois.

Of 125 students taking a class in "Introduction to Home Economics", the plans for future jobs pretty well covered the careers which tie directly to the home. The range included teaching, extension work as county home advisers; apparel design; merchandising; interior decoration; writing and radio work, dietetics; child development; commercial foods work; textiles and clothing; equipment and social service work. Of course a "home of my own" was most often mentioned as the final goal.

In this class, students heard the "experience" stories of home economists who are working in the different fields. In that way they got a "real-life" picture of just what each job includes.

When it came to naming their own choices, the girls showed a number of interests.

Home economics teaching won a good many votes. Several reasons for attraction to the schoolroom were listed by the girls. Among them were the many openings, good pay; chances for advancement and long vacations for additional training.

One student wrote, "The teacher of home economics has a wider opportunity for teaching a better way of life than any other teacher because she is expected to indirectly encourage a student's desire for a better and more abundant life."

Interior decoration was the preference of several students. One would-be decorator wrote, "There's a great future ahead for interior decorators because of the tremendous increase in building of homes since the war."

Several girls hope to be buyers of clothing for department stores. They see both advantages and disadvantages to their choice. On the credit side, they listed, "many chances to meet new people, travel to large cities and something different every day." On the other hand, "it takes a long time to arrive and you are under a physical and sometimes a mental strain."

Careers in dietetics are attracting a number of girls for such reasons as an interest in foods and the many opportunities available in various types of hospitals and sanitariums. "They look forward to having a regular salary coming in, a place to live, a good profession, and good companionship."

Forecasts Given for Grasshoppers, Corn Borers in 1949

A grasshopper outbreak as bad as that of 1948 is possible this summer, but by no means certain. For corn borers, the infestation over the state is about the same as last year.

That's the forecast of Dr. G. C. Decker, College of Agriculture and State Natural History Survey insect specialist.

"Weather conditions at hatching time in late May and early June will largely determine how serious grasshoppers will be in 1949," Decker said. An even coverage of chlordane spray of at least one-half pound per acre is the recommended control method.

"Grasshopper eggs overwinter along roadsides, fence rows and pastures," Decker explained. "It's important to spray these areas soon after hatching, but before the pests move into green farm crops and eat them."

The corn borer threat is greatest in the counties between U. S. highway 30 and a line drawn across the state from Quincy to Champaign, Decker said.

A spray of around 400 pounds' pressure, using one to one and one-half pounds of Ryania or DDT per acre per treatment, is recommended. Market corn may need four or five sprayings, but canning and field corn seldom need more than one treatment.

North of U. S. highway 30 the corn borer threat is not so great now as it has been in the past three years, but control practices should still be followed, including use of insecticides in some cases. South of the Quincy-Champaign line the threat is not serious.

County extension work as home advisers was the choice of several girls. Their liking for a wide variety of work with a number of different age groups helped them make this choice.

BE 'ON GUARD' FOR CANCER

One of our nation's worst death-dealers is cancer. Early diagnosis and treatment are important in reducing this toll.

Miss Elizabeth Scofield, health specialist at the University of Illinois College of Agriculture, explains that everyone needs to be on the alert, because this disease may occur at any age. People who are 45 years of age or older should be especially careful; more than 90 percent of the cases in Illinois occur in that age group. Many cases can be cured if discovered early enough and treated properly without delay.

Miss Scofield says that doctors stress certain danger signals which should be heeded. These include, a painless lump or thickening, especially in the breast, lip or tongue; any irregular bleeding or discharge from the body; a sore that doesn't heal—especially about the tongue or mouth; persistent indigestion; or change in the color or size of a mole or birthmark.

When any one of these symptoms does occur, see your family doctor at once. He may refer you to one of the cancer diagnostic clinics in the state. These centers have been established at various hospitals in each area of the state through the Division of Cancer Control, Illinois Department of Public Health. You may obtain information about the clinics by writing to the Department of Public Health at Springfield.

Teaching Religion

Lesson for February 6, 1949

SOME PEOPLE, strange to say, don't believe in Sunday schools. Most North American Protestants do, because Jesus did. The word may not be found in the New Testament, but the thing is there. If Jesus did not believe that religion could be taught, then he was guilty of wasting much of his time, for he worked at teaching in season and out of season. He was a product of the Sunday school, in a sense. During his childhood he would go to the synagogue school week days and especially on Sabbaths; we know that by the time he was grown it was his "custom" to attend synagogue services.

Dr. Foreman

And in every Jewish community the synagogue was the place where for two hundred years and more, children and youth and older people had been taught the Word of God.

If Christians today are faithful to Christ's example, we also will keep at the job of teaching our religion to every child within our reach.

Body and Soul
READERS of the gospels will note that when Jesus went home from the synagogue on the Sabbath, his day's work was not done. He would spend hours, sometimes till far into the night, healing people brought to him for cure. Jesus ministered to mind and soul. Jesus was interested in personalities, whole people, not half-people. Our minds have to be fed, but we live in bodies, and bodies have no little to do with personalities. Jesus was not content with teaching sick people; he made sick people well. So the church today, if it is faithful to Christ's principles, will consider people as complete personalities.

The Common People
WE FIND that Jesus did not insist on university audiences. Indeed, he never spoke to a university audience. There were great universities in those days, but it was not necessary for any one to be a graduate of one of them in order to enter Jesus' school, or to understand what he taught. He taught the plain people plainly. Again the church of today takes a leaf out of Jesus' book. Most of our Sunday schools, for instance, have graded lessons; the little tots do not study from the same quarterlies the grown people use.

In all our teachings we try to use the pupil's language and to put our Christian ideas in the thoughts that the pupils can understand.

At the best seminaries, young ministers-to-be are carefully taught how to put the great Christian doctrines in ways that the simplest over people's heads is not teaching.

God and Education
JESUS did not try to teach people carpentry, or arithmetic, or geography. No doubt he could have done so. But he had something more important on his mind, something which he alone could teach. He taught religion, or in other words he taught the truth about God, and about man, and about right relations between God and man. So the teaching church, whether in the Sunday school or in the books written by its scholars or in its schools and colleges, when it follows Christ's example, is always teaching religion first and foremost. We do not believe that religion is a secondary issue, something you can "take or leave."

Religion On Two Feet
JESUS did more than talk. He lived. His whole life and character were saying more loudly and plainly what his words said.

So the Christian church today, when it is faithful to Christ, must translate into actual living the faith she teaches in Sunday school lessons, in catechisms and books and sermons.

What we do, as Christians, speaks louder than what we say. Every Sunday school teacher needs to remember that what is said on Sunday is important, but what the teacher does on Monday is more impressive by far. The reason why Jesus was more effective than John the Baptist was that John, after all, was a Voice, while Jesus was a Friend.

Vote At School Election Saturday, Feb. 2, 1949

Vote No ☒

We sincerely desire to improve the educational facilities of our children. Will the proposed consolidation in its present form obtain that objective? The advantages of consolidating certain grade school areas are overshadowed by the disadvantages inherent in the present plan. The fundamental precepts of improving our educational facilities have not been applied in proposing the Community Unit district recommended for this area.

It is agreed by all that this proposed district will result in increasing the school taxes. If the children receive better education for our tax dollar, there can be no valid objection to increasing taxes, but it appears that this proposed district will result in only increased taxes without the benefits accruing of increased educational facilities.

Before voting answer these questions:

1. Can a small high school of less than 300 enrollment offer the educational opportunities of a high school similar to Joliet T. H. S. or Bloom T. H. S.? (Minimum courses recommended by the committee are 11. J.T.H.S. offers 16. Present small high schools generally offer about six.)
2. Can a small high school specialize in courses so that the graduates are fully equipped to either take jobs in that field or continue in college?
3. Will the costs of a small high school in this area justify itself? (The school survey states that costs are prohibitive with an enrollment less than 300. Present high school enrollment in the proposed area is 255.)
4. What administrative efficiency can result from a seven man board administering the schools of Frankfort, Mokena, New Lenox, and Manhattan? Can such a board fairly and harmoniously represent the interests of each community?
5. What educational benefits will the grade school children receive from the proposed consolidation?
6. Would a full time administrator be justified for this area as recommended by the survey committee?
7. Is the proposed consolidation working at cross purposes in trying to establish a small high school area on one hand and a large grade school unit on the other?
8. Is there any assurance that tax assessments will be uniform in the entire area? (Each township now has its own assessor and there exists no uniform method of assessment.)

The advantages of consolidating grade school areas can be preserved and obtained later by the choice of each individual district.
